Despair and Anger as Puerto Ricans Cope With Debt Crisis

(NY Times) On the first day of the new sales tax, which jumped to 11.5 percent from 7 percent, the government's latest rummage for more revenue, Puerto Rico's malaise was unmistakable. After nearly a decade of recession, Puerto Rico's government says it cannot pay its $73 billion debt much longer. Gov. Alejandro García Padilla warns that more austerity is on the way, a necessity for an island now working feverishly to rescue itself. With so many bracing for another slide toward the bottom, the sense of despair grows more palpable by the day. Before long, Puerto Ricans will face more tax increases the next one is in October. Next on the list of anticipated measures, these for government workers, are fewer vacations, overtime hours and paid sick days. Others in Puerto Rico may face cuts in health care benefits and even bus routes, all changes that economic advisers say should be made to jump-start the economy. People ricochet from anger to resignation back to anger again. Along San Juan's colonial-era streets, in homes and shops, Puerto Ricans blame the government for the economic debacle. Election after election, they say, political leaders took the easy way out, spending more than they had, borrowing to prop up the budget, pointing fingers at one another and failing to own up to reality.

Significant Events – International

Tunisia beach attack: State of emergency declared

(BBC News) Tunisia has declared a state of emergency, just over a week after 38 tourists, mainly Britons, died in an attack in the resort city of Sousse. The state of emergency gives security forces more powers and limits the right of public assembly. Authorities had already tightened security, deploying more than 1,400 armed officers at hotels and beaches. Tunisian President Beji Caid Essebsi said in a national address that "exceptional measures" were needed. "In order to face up to this scourge we need to be prepared. We need to have enough troops, proper training and material means - we are in desperate need of material means," he said, appealing for international counter-terrorism support and co-operation. The state of emergency will be in place for a renewable period of 30 days. An official from the prime minister's office said several officials had been fired in the wake of the attack, including the governor of Sousse. "Just as there have been security failures, there have also been political failures," Dhafer Neji told AFP. Security forces were criticized for not responding more quickly to the attack on 26 June in Sousse, when a gunman opened fire on tourists on a beach and in a hotel before being shot dead by police. Those killed included 30 Britons. The gunman has been identified as student Seifeddine Rezgui, who authorities say had trained in Libya. Tunisian Prime Minister Habib Essid conceded in a BBC interview on Friday that the slow response of the police was a key problem.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A disturbance off the central California coast will continue to bring a slight chance of showers or thunderstorms to the mountains through the week. Meanwhile, overnight low clouds and fog will plague the coast, but will pull back to the immediate coast during the late morning and early afternoon.

Medford Weather:

Most areas will be dry this morning, although isolated showers in Modoc County this morning as a weak upward moving trough moves through.

Reno Weather:

Low pressure near the California coast will keep the threat for showers and thunderstorms through much of the upcoming week. Thunderstorm coverage will be more isolated today, followed by an increased chance for stronger storms with locally heavy rainfall possible Monday through Thursday.

San Francisco Weather:

A persistent marine layer and light onshore flow will result in widespread night and morning low clouds, patchy fog, and possible drizzle in coastal locations through much of the week. Otherwise, dry weather conditions will persist with temperatures gradually cooling through midweek.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Gradual cooling can be expected over the next few days along with daily afternoon and evening thunderstorms mainly over the mountains. Thunderstorm coverage may increase over the mountains, northern Sacramento Valley and surrounding foothills on Tuesday and Wednesday as an upper low over the Eastern Pacific moves towards the California coast.

Hanford Weather:

Scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms will continue over the high country of the southern Sierra Nevada through Monday then only a slight chance each afternoon through Wednesday. A weather disturbance will cross the area on Thursday bringing a chance of thunderstorms to the Sierra and a cooling trend late next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Upper level low pressure off the coast will maintain night through morning low clouds and fog in coastal and most valley areas through Tuesday with temperatures generally near to slightly below normal. Low pressure will approach and move into central California Wednesday through Friday, bringing a deeper marine layer and generally below normal temperatures. Some warming is expected next weekend as the upper low moves away from the Los Angeles area.

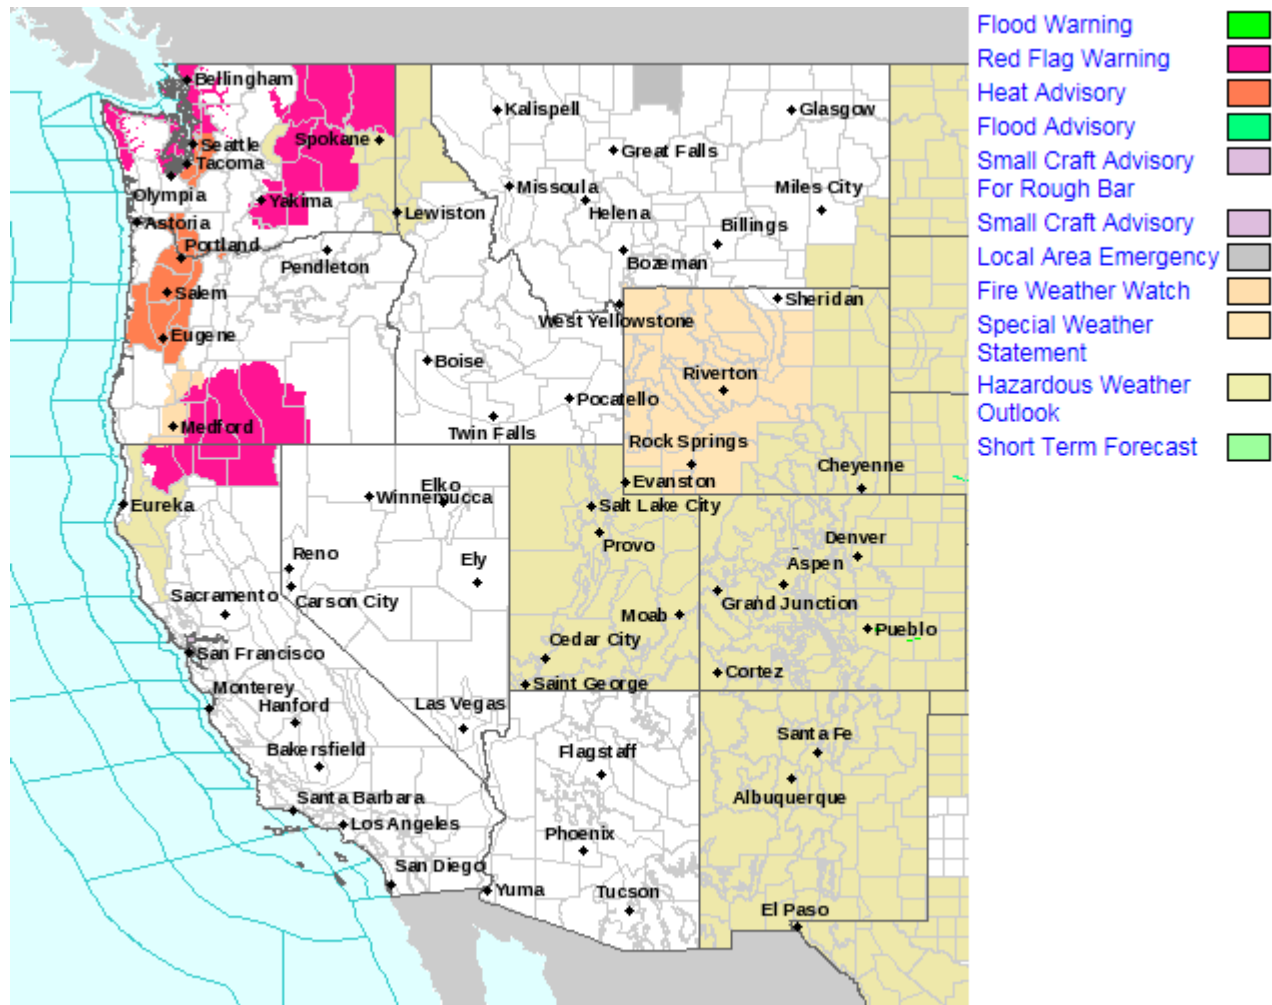

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure over the interior southwest states will keep a flow of mid-level monsoonal moisture into southern California into Monday with the mountains of southwestern California on the western fringe of this moisture. This will maintain a slight chance of afternoon and early evening thunderstorms near the mountains through Monday. A weak low pressure system off the California coast will move slowly inland the mid to latter part of the week. For next weekend, high pressure to the east will begin to expand westward across southern California bringing warming to near seasonal levels and a shallower marine layer

Southeast California Weather:

Afternoon temperatures are forecast at near normal values through the upcoming week.
